Short Talks With Young Mothers, on the Management of Infants, and Young Children

Charles Gilmore Kerley 2015-06-15 Excerpt from Short Talks With Young Mothers, on the Management of Infants, and Young Children The aim of this book is to help the young mother to a closer acquaintance with and a more intelligent appreciation of the nature and demands of the little life entrusted to her care. In its preparation the author has kept in mind and has endeavored to answer the personal questions of many thoughtful young mothers. Under management are given such suggestions as may be carried out by the mother or nurse and in no way do away with the necessity of a physician. Suggestions relating to medical treatment are intentionally avoided. A mother should know all the details of the child's feeding, clothing, bathing, and airing, and what to do in an emergency. She should also be able to recognize symptoms of illness and appreciate their significance. She is not supposed to be skilled in the use of drugs. Short Talks on Personal and Community Health Louis Lehrfeld 2015-06-16 Excerpt from Short Talks on Personal and Community Health Since 1908 the Department of Public Health and Charities has issued health bulletins in the form of short talks addressed to the public through the press on subjects of vital interest dealing with the prevention of disease and the promotion of the public health. It has been my experience that such education, while profitable, is rather slow. The quickest and most valuable way of teaching the public is through the schools and colleges. Public health education makes its greatest impression upon the young. Their minds can be molded to think along the lines of health and sanitation. The health talks in this book have received the hearty endorsement of the Department of Public Health and Charities of Philadelphia. They are written in such popular form as to be understood by every school pupil and college student. The subjects are so varied as to cover a very wide scope of public health work. A more intimate knowledge of these various principles of preventive medicine will be of greater material benefit than all legislation intended to regulate the habits and customs of the very busy American public. Short Talks to Princeton Students on Liberal Studies (Classic Reprint) 2018-01-25 Excerpt from Short Talks to Princeton Students on Liberal Studies Why not let every man take what he wants? Well, why not? The argument is that if a student takes What he likes, without restriction, he will do better work and be happier in it. It is very alluring. It goes to the roots Of human life. If it is Wholly true, as it is in part, then prescribed courses in college should be abolished as useless and fretting hindrances to freedom. What is true in it? This much - that there is a sense, a higher sense, in which pleasure is the true end of human life, and a sense, a lower sense, in which pleasure is not the true end of human life. The higher sense is happiness and the lower sense is self-indulgence. And happiness means the enduring satisfaction that inevitably comes from doing what we know we ought to do, just as self-indulgence means the transient satisfaction that comes from doing whatever our desires or caprices suggest. The former progressively strengthens and the latter progressively weakens the human mind. It is the old, eternal question of self-mastery through self-control: When Duty whispers low 'thou must' And youth replies 'i can.' Of the many wonderful animals which lived during that period in the earth's history only some of the most striking among the gigantic types are discussed. For information to be found in books regarding these animals, the author has relied chiefly on two works by Frederic A. Lucas, "Animals of the Past" and "Animals before Man in North America: Their Lives and their Times"; "Extinct Animals" by Sir Edwin Ray Lankester;

2015-07-02 Excerpt from Something Happened: And Other Short Talks The following pages are reprinted from the columns of the Good Will Record. The talks which appear here in abbreviated form were delivered on various occasions - in the Moody Memorial Chapel at Good Will Farm, at boys' conferences, at college Y. M. C. A. meetings, and by summer camp fires. The many testimonials to the helpfulness of a former volume - Good Will Short Talks - were an encouragement to put these in permanent form in the hope that they, too, might be of service to a larger number of boys than my voice will ever reach. Grit Angela Duckworth 2016-05-03 In this instant New York Times bestseller, Angela Duckworth shows anyone striving to succeed that the secret to outstanding achievement is not talent, but a special blend of passion and persistence she calls “grit.” “Inspiration for non-geniuses everywhere” (People). The daughter of a scientist who frequently noted her lack of “genius,” Angela Duckworth is now a celebrated researcher and professor. It was her early eye-opening stints in teaching, business consulting, and neuroscience that led to her hypothesis about what really drives success: not genius, but a unique combination of passion and long-term perseverance. In Grit, she takes us into the field to visit cadets struggling through their first days at West Point, teachers working in some of the toughest schools, and young finalists in the National Spelling Bee. She also mines fascinating insights from history and shows what can be gleaned from modern experiments in peak performance. Finally, she shares what she's learned from interviewing dozens of high achievers—from JP Morgan CEO Jamie Dimon to New Yorker cartoon editor Bob Mankoff to Seattle Seahawks Coach Pete Carroll.

“Duckworth’s ideas about the cultivation of tenacity have clearly changed some lives for the better” (The New York Times Book Review). Among Grit’s most valuable insights: any effort you make ultimately counts twice toward your goal; grit can be learned, regardless of IQ or circumstances; when it comes to child-rearing, neither a warm embrace nor high standards will work by themselves; how to trigger lifelong interest; the magic of the Hard Thing Rule; and so much more. Wittingly personal, insightful, and even life-changing, Grit is a book about what goes through your head when you fall down, and how that—not talent or luck—makes all the difference. This is “a fascinating tour of the psychological research on success” (The Wall Street Journal).

The Making of Pictures Sarah W. Whitman 2016-11-20 Excerpt from The Making of Pictures: Twelve Short Talks With Young People It has always been so; it may be safely said that it will continue to be so; while in the period in which we live, when mechanical adjustments and scientific processes have varied the methods of obtaining pictures, and multiplied their number almost infinitely, a very large part of the education of our country is carried on by means of pictures. They are found in all directions:

magazines are profusely illustrated; books and papers are full of them; the photograph, the lithograph, the engraving, are produced in enormous quantities in Short, we live in a world of pictures, and consciously, or unconsciously, we are receiving numberless impressions from them. It is these impressions which, as I have just said, educate us; for all sorts of ideas regarding men and things find their way to our minds through seeing pictures which represent what is going on in life.
